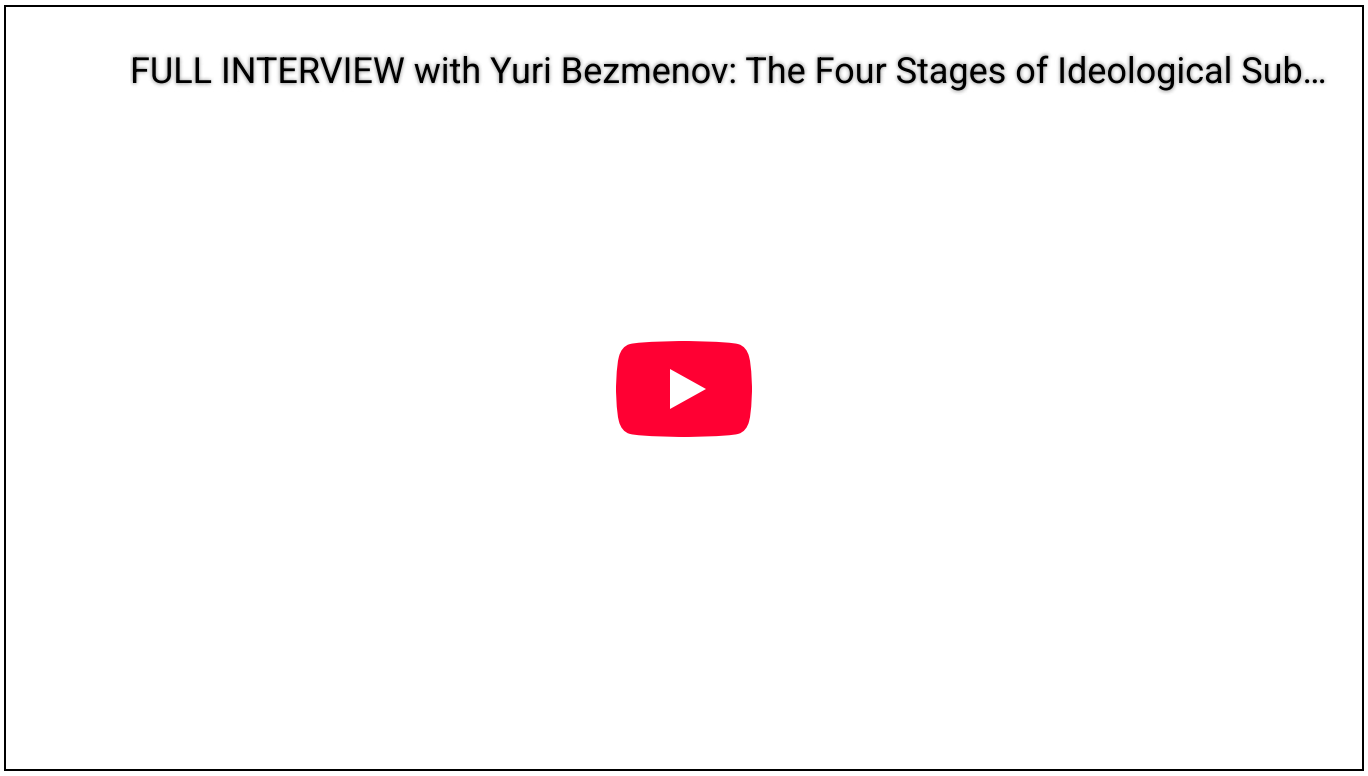
Bezmenov's plan of subversion is divided into four stages: demoralization, destabilization, crisis, and normalization. Does this remind you of anything?

Langues »



In this video, we meet Yuri Bezmenov, a Soviet informant and KGB agent who defected to the United States in the early 1970s. In a 1984 interview, increasingly difficult to find, given to G. Edward Griffin and titled "Deception Was My Trade," he outlined the four stages of "ideological subversion" implemented by radical Marxists to indoctrinate and weaken nations from within. (YouTube) Nicholas Marshall (https://www.youtube.com/@ibelievedinthesystem))

For a long time now, physical battlefields have represented only a small part of the wars waged by the great powers. The bulk of these wars is immaterial, because they are informational. And the Soviets excelled in this domain, just like their Nazi contemporaries. However, as we have seen, the New World owes a great deal to the Soviet and Nazi legacy.

Moreover, in the trilogy (Dispossession/Planetary Coup/Humanity Vampirized), we regularly discussed neo-Nazi and neo-Soviet concepts, given how relevant the vestiges and tools of the former blocs were. This ideological mix is not only present but also fundamental to the story.[1]

This political syncretism naturally makes information, and the seat of thought that processes it, a prime target. In both cases, the human being is objectified and intended to be exploited in order to maximize their "performance," even if this means merging them with elements of the information machine.

Moving from human to transhuman, and then to cyborg, is perfectly compatible with the ultra-materialistic and scientistic values of the designers of the System already in place. We have shared a revealing document on the subject. It is the result of a conference held in December 2001 and strongly supported by the military.[2] :

Regardless of whether you are pro-Russian or pro-NATO, this site details the potential activities of a cognitive war that can be waged against populations: https://www.act.nato.int/activities/cognitive-warfare/ (https://www.act.nato.int/activities/cognitive-warfare/)

The global coup would never have taken place without ideological subversion.

Ideological subversion is part of our daily lives without the majority of the population realizing it. The act of making people believe that it is necessary to weaken a strong currency, to make a society "open" even if it lacks the means, to destroy forests and agricultural land within a framework of sustainable development,, installing wind turbines in nature (land/sea) despite the proven nuisances, etc., constitutes an ideological subversion that we sometimes call "escrology».

Reversing the meaning of acts where we call neo-liberalism the direct and indirect sponsorship of the State in favor of a few groups is an ideological subversion.

Mistreating critical thinkers by labeling them conspiracy theorists, without offering any apology when their claims turn out to be true, is part of the subversive's arsenal. It's a form of intimidation aimed at silencing dissenters who might hinder the deployment of subversive tools.

The GAFAM companies are champions of censorship, using cyberattacks against websites they dislike, shutting down accounts of figures who hold views contrary to the mainstream, promoting information that aligns with their leaders' narrative, and censoring everything else. And so on and so forth.

Subversion, according to a document presented by the School of Economic Warfare

«Subversion, in its essence, aims to overturn everything of value within the targeted country until its population's perception is so far removed from its initial values that the attacking country no longer appears as an enemy. On the contrary, its system, its ambitions, and its civilization become a viable alternative. Whether this alternative is desirable or not is not the point; the important thing is that it appears feasible and a potential solution to the situation in which the population finds itself at that precise moment. It should be noted that all of these processes are observable and that the actors who perpetrate these destructive acts of subversion are not terrorists but most often diplomats, journalists, engineers, professors, or others who are not necessarily aware of the impact of their actions. Subversion became a major element of the USSR's influence policy. So much so that in the mid-1980s, approximately 85% of the KGB's expenditures were allocated to subversion operations, also known as active measures.».

"These measures are part of a four-step plan that includes: Demoralization, Destabilization, Crisis, and Normalization." ~ Alexandre Perfetti, from the School of Economic Warfare

Protect your society from ideological subversion. Boris Popov

Langues »

In the book "*Ideological subversion revealed: Protect your society!*In his book, Boris Popov, a former KGB (Soviet intelligence service) agent, calls on citizens of free societies worldwide to remain vigilant in identifying and countering subversive communist tactics that threaten individual liberty, religious beliefs, social morality, national sovereignty, peace, and truth. This book sheds light on the mechanisms of ideological subversion and warns citizens against covert operations designed to disrupt their way of life.

Popov emphasizes that ideological subversion poses a significant threat to free societies worldwide. It often begins by influencing individuals in positions of power within academia, government, or the media, thereby increasing their influence over future generations. These core ideas are diametrically opposed to those espoused by democratic nations, leading to a drift toward Marxism-Leninism.

The author describes how subversive tactics include subtly manipulating media coverage, artistic expressions, books, magazines, schools, universities, political parties, youth organizations, trade unions, foundations, charities, research institutes, religious groups, and their leaders for strategic purposes. They seek to stimulate individuals' aspirations for freedom, equality, social justice, and democracy, but pervert these aspirations to generate division within the population, rather than unity.[3]

Ideological and political subversion, a revolution from above

One of the well-known weapons of the Soviet era is ideological subversion. It consists of a A set of strategies and techniques aimed at destabilizing a group or system by introducing ideas that challenge its values (https://fr.wikipedia.org/wiki/Valeurs_(sociologie)) the most intimate ones.

Its aim can range from simply challenging a society or group to change its cultural and ideological foundations, to sabotaging institutions in order to foment a revolution and establish a new political regime. Wikipedia

«Subversion is a technique for weakening power and demoralizing citizens; this technique is based on knowledge of the laws of psychology and psychosociology, because it targets public opinion as much as the government and the armed forces at its disposal." ~ Roger Mucchielli, psychosociologist and psychopedagogue, in "Subversion», 1971

Structure and functioning of subversion

In order to achieve its objectives, subversion requires the participation of institutional or private state bodies, technological, media, academic, etc. It must be structured through... canals information and disinformation, as well as a pool of facilitators/agents.

«Disinformation channels can be direct or indirect, the latter being more subtle, exploiting a sometimes significant number of "influence agents", more or less aware of the role they are made to play, but all the more valuable because they are placed in important positions. The strategy consists of drowning the truth in a flood of extraneous information, a complex dialectic to infiltrate biased, misleading information that appears authentic. It is all the more effective because it relies on the media, newspapers in particular, which, as Mucchielli writes, "have all the appearances of good faith and objectivity."».

He explains that the demoralization of a group or a nation occurs through the erosion of its courage and the mental fortitude that fosters faith in values and confidence in the future. He identifies several subversive methods of demoralizing a group: disinformation, the sowing of doubt, the destruction of values, the instilling of guilt to undermine conviction in the justice of a cause, the feeling of isolation in the face of a multitude whose disapproval is unanimous, the creation of a sense of ridicule, illogic, or absurdity, the impression of a protracted struggle, the certainty of facing a tough enemy confident of total victory, the impression of the struggle's futility, and dissociation, which consists of inciting discord to break all unity and cohesion. Matrix of Soviet informational subversion

On December 7, 2021, the French Cyber Defense Command organized a seminar aimed at uncovering the workings of the subversion system deployed by the USSR to weaken the United States, an opportunity to bring out an interview with Yuri Aleksandrovich Bezmenov (1939-1993) directed in 1984 by G. Edward Griffin. Also known as Tomas David Schuman, Bezmenov was a Soviet journalist and KGB agent *specializing in propaganda and ideological subversion.

The conference was presented in a short press release issued by the School of Economic Warfare, which stated:

«At a time when hybrid warfare and information warfare are beginning to be discussed seriously here and there, the French Cyber Defence Command has emphasized the importance of digital influence as a new tool of power at the heart of the actions of the armed forces and, more broadly, of our society.

The Soviets were very involved in this area in the past. In the early 80s, the United States and the USSR vied for global ideological dominance in multiple conflicts, one advocating capitalism and the other communism as a unique thoughts (https://www.monde-diplomatique.fr/1995/01/RAMONET/6069)».[4]

20 key ideas of ideological subversion'a nation-state

In this world where everything happens in the shadows and influence reigns supreme, Yuri Bezmenov (aka Tomas Schuman) reveals 20 key elements for subverting society[5] :

1. Ideological subversion is a long-term process, spanning 15 to 60 years, designed to change the perception of reality in a target nation without the need for military force.

2. Only about 15% of the KGB's efforts were focused on traditional espionage; the majority targeted psychological warfare and ideological manipulation.

3. The objective is to demoralizing a society by undermining its moral, educational, and cultural foundations, rendering people incapable of recognizing or defending themselves against threats.

4. Demoralization takes 15 to 20 years, the time needed to educate a generation with subversive ideas.

5. Education systems at all levels are key targetstransforming schools into centers ofindoctrination which promote the relativism in relation to facts and critical thinking.

6. Media infiltration sows the seeds confusion by amplifying divisive narratives and discrediting objective truth.

7. Religion is attacked by describing it as outdated or oppressive, by eroding spiritual anchors and replacing them with loyalty to the State or the nihilism.

Langues »

8. The Family structures are weakened through the promotion of individualism, divorce and alternative lifestyles that fragment social cohesion.

9. Moral relativism blurs the lines between good and evil, leading to...apathy and the inability to unite against the true enemies of a society.

10. History is being rewritten to vilify national heroes and traditionsby fostering self-doubt and guilt in the population.

11. After demoralization, destabilization lasts 2 to 5 years, targeting the economy, foreign relations and defense to create internal chaos.

12. Economic sabotage widens class divisions, shrinks the middle class, and breeds resentment through inflation, shortages, or inequality.

13. Foreign policy is manipulated to isolate the nationleading to alliances and emboldening adversaries.

14. Defense readiness is eroded by budget cuts, internal divisions, or anti-military propaganda.

15. The stage of the crisis erupts in violence or upheaval, where a demoralized and destabilized society demands radical solutions.

16. During the crisis, People voluntarily give up their freedoms for the promised security. paving the way for authoritarian control.

17. Normalization is the final phase, where subversive changes become the "new normal," institutionalized and irreversible.

18. The opposition is silenced by censorship, marginalization, or elimination at the standardization stage.

19. The process is based on "useful idiots"– well-intentioned Western intellectuals, elites, activists, and leaders who are moving forward" involuntarily societal suicide.

20. Once subversion succeeds, not even the exposure of the truth will reverse it, because the population rejects facts that contradict their reprogrammed worldview.

Ideological subversion is linked to some of the practices presented in the trilogy Dispossession/Planetary Coup/Vampirized Humanity. Here is an excerpt from Vampirized Humanity that describes the importance of controlling human thought, in order to make it compatible with what is expected of the population of the New Society…

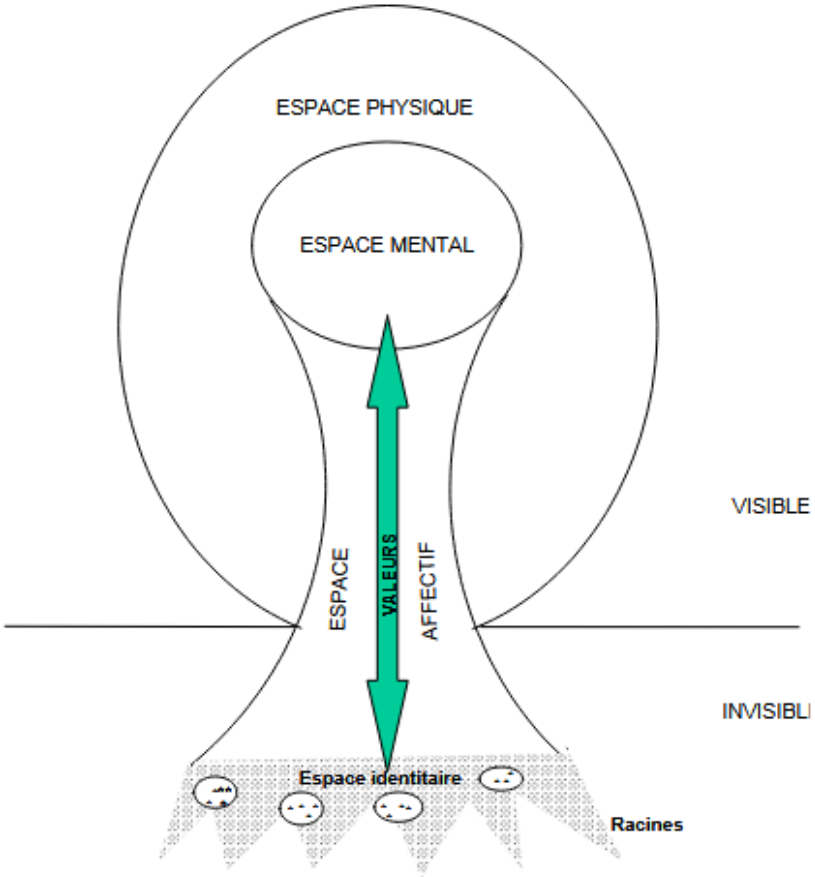
Humanity vampirized – excerpt

Ideological subversion attacks the mind of man

The human brain is the primary target of the subjugation of populations whose mobility will be increasingly restricted. Undermining invisible reference points is an essential step in forcing humanity to adopt the new reference points concocted by supranational governance.

Langues »

To achieve this, it was first necessary to shatter the historical and traditional reference points inherent to humanity. Their loss weakens humanity, leaving our earthlings vulnerable to the allure of alternatives offered by the education system, to which the media belong. Without real (non-virtual) and healthy emotional reference points, no human being can resist the daily tsunami of information and invitations to transgress the traditional moral order.



(https://i0.wp.com/reseauinternational.net/wp-content/uploads/2025/11/image-99.png?ssl=1)

Diagram representing the dimensions that constitute the human being.

10 reference points torpedoed

1. The end of belief in a God who created the universe was a pivotal moment. The two key theories to note are the Big Bang theory (Catholic priest) and the theory of evolution. The architects of the New World rely on these theories to present their societal model as a "supernatural" creation of the theory of evolution, which will have cosmic and divine repercussions.

2. The End of the Family Model. Currently, the concept of family is being fiercely attacked by eugenicist NGOs owned by billionaire investors. The loss of family structures increases the risk of family members becoming vulnerable. To compensate, there is an ever-increasing reliance on social services, psychiatry, psychotherapy, and developmental programs of all kinds. Unfortunately, these centers are not intended to replace the family.

Langues »

3. The end of the relationship has made the economic and emotional situation of many women more precarious. They have been directly exposed to poverty and an increased burden of responsibilities, as they have had to fill the void left by their partners.

4. The end of belonging to a local culture, destroyed by a politically organized mass migration. Here, we will focus on migrations from peripheral areas to urban centers. Governments orchestrated these migrations by complicating the daily lives of residents, depriving them of basic public services (post office, healthcare centers, schools, trains, etc.). The abandonment of rural areas was deliberately engineered.

5. The end of belonging to an identifiable territory. The territories of belonging that served as solid points of reference for a large part of the population have been atomized, reorganized, corporatized, and financialized. To such an extent that even municipalities have had to disappear in the name of the globalization of activities.

6. The end of contact with reality. The all-digital world, which includes the omnipresence of ad hoc tools, has revolutionized the way of life in its smallest details.

7. The end of the physically dedicated workspace. The shift from a physical workspace to remote work hasn't been successful for everyone. It has become a source of stress for many people who have lost physical, emotional, and social contact with their boss or colleagues.

8. The end of cash. The ongoing elimination of cash is an additional source of stress for many. Their work is rewarded with figures that have no material reality, unlike the very physical effort they put in. Even more serious is the ease with which a person can be dispossessed and excluded from the system.

9. The schism between authorities and the people. The loss of confidence in the country's authorities is a very painful moment for the people of almost every country. Their loyalty to financiers, at the expense of the voters, is a source of insecurity.

10. The end of the relationship of trust with religious figures. The scandals that have tarnished many religious representatives have certainly contributed to effectively destroying essential points of reference.

These ten randomly chosen examples illustrate the destructive consequences on individuals' sense of security. They are all sources of destabilization and insecurity – mental, emotional, and related to identity.

Internally weakened, the person becomes more easily receptive to all kinds of propaganda messages deliberately transmitted through the educational, media, entertainment, esoteric, etc. systems.
